The Nomad Collection from Chet Childress

Chet Childress is a modern nomad that travels the continent seeking out some of the most “insane terrain” in the world. And then he skateboards it. He also happens to be an artist that creates some amazing artwork on whatever medium is available including brown paper bags, cardboard and now Jessup ULTRAGRIP griptape.

He is a 49-year-old professional skateboarder that admits he hasn’t worked since he was 21. But that doesn’t mean he isn’t doing anything. Chet thrives on discovering the backroads skateboarding – the more obscure the better. Parks, pools, banks - he has skated them all.

Born in 1974, Chet Childress grew up skating in Wilmington, NC. From the beginning he went against the grain of what’s popular by embracing skateboarding rather than surfing. Now he drives across the country chasing random skateboarding locations.

And that’s his message to the rest of us. According to Chet, “Please stay outside looking at the Mother Nature called skateboarding and draw a picture of how you feel. That’s what I choose to do.”
